From Your Editor— A Car Story of Epic Proportions!

From time to time in this space I'd like to relate car stories that I find interesting. Here's my latest tale:

I don't know if you know about this, but Albuquerque is crisscrossed by a series of bicycle paths and bikeways. In fact, the street behind my house is a designated bikeway that allows bicyclists to ride anywhere in the lane. Keep that in mind when you happen upon such a street. This means that streets with the proper signage the cyclists are in charge.

I have been a cyclist for many, many years. I've ridden many 100-mile rides, at the same time as maintaining a healthy sized car collection. That's one of the reasons I like the Wheels Museum so much, since it displays all kinds of wheeled conveyances. "All Right" you might say, "What's all this have to do with cars? Just read on and you'll find out. I think it's kinda cool.

I'm sure you're aware that bicycle racers are a thing. Since Albuquerque is at an altitude of about one mile, (You're not the only one Denver!) it has attracted riders seeking high altitude training. In fact on most weekends you'll see a bunch of those folks cycling up Tijeras Canyon and then farther on. Back to my point, the truly epic cycle races generally take place in Europe almost every day during the championship cycling season from January to October.

When the racing route goes over mountains those mountains may be assigned a classification number that is translated into points along the race. The cool thing concerns how those classifications ranging from 1 through 4 and then the biggest HC which stands for Hors (above category or HC) are assigned. Legend has it that the classifications were originally decided with a Citroën 2CV car, with the climb's category judged to be the same as the gear necessary to motor up the incline. If the Citroen can shift up to 4th gear it's category 4, 3 if only to 3rd gear, category 3 and so on. The fun is that the HC mountains are said to be slopes that the poor Citroens couldn't climb at all! I hope you enjoyed the tale of the mountain classifications. I think we owe the designers of the Citroen 2CV recognition its contribution to bicycle racing. Viva La Citroen!—

This Month in Car History

I'm going to use this space to highlight interesting events in the history of cars. Let's see what happened in February.

February 12, 2014: A sinkhole collapsed part of the National Corvette Museum in Bowling Green damaging eight cars.

February 9, 1952: A two-way radio was first used in NASCAR competition.

February 7, 1959: The Daytona International Speedway formally opened.
